Nobody is quite sure why it is called "French Beading" as it is thought to have originated in medieval Venice. This craft is all about using seed beads threaded onto wire which is then shaped to make flowers. It is believed that the craft began when the wives of glass blowers (from Murano in Venice) started using the tiny seed beads formed from off-cuts of glass, to make flower to sell for an additional income. French Flower Beading Instructions - Kimberly Chapman's ... This is how to make basic petals and leaves using the French flower beading technique. Some patterns require other techniques such as loops, the four-row crossover, etc. Remember, as with all of my pages that have a black background, you can view these instructions in your default font and colours with the link near the bottom of the page.
